

How to Get Published in TESOL and Applied Linguistics Serials

Applied Linguistics

Editor(s): John Hellermann & Anna Mauranen

Editor/Journal E-mail: applij.editorialoffice@oup.com

Journal URL: <http://applij.oxfordjournals.org/>

Journal description:

Applied Linguistics publishes research into language with relevance to real-world problems. The journal is keen to help make connections between fields, theories, research methods, and scholarly discourses, and welcomes contributions which critically reflect on current practices in applied linguistic research. It promotes scholarly and scientific discussion of issues that unite or divide scholars in applied linguistics. It is less interested in the ad hoc solution of particular problems and more interested in the handling of problems in a principled way by reference to theoretical studies.

Applied linguistics is viewed not only as the relation between theory and practice, but also as the study of language and language-related problems in specific situations in which people use and learn languages. Within this framework the journal welcomes contributions in such areas of current enquiry as: bilingualism and multilingualism; computer-mediated communication; conversation analysis; corpus linguistics; critical discourse analysis; deaf linguistics; discourse analysis and pragmatics; first and additional language learning, teaching, and use; forensic linguistics; language assessment; language planning and policies; language for special purposes; lexicography; literacies; multimodal communication; rhetoric and stylistics; and translation. The journal welcomes both reports of original research and conceptual articles.

The Journal's Forum section is intended to enhance debate between authors and the wider community of applied linguists (see Editorial in 22/1) and affords a quicker turnaround time for short pieces. Forum pieces are typically responses to a published article, a shorter research note or report, or a commentary on research issues or professional practices. The Journal also contains a Reviews section.

Editor/Journal E-mail: alr@degruyter.com

Journal URL: <http://www.degruyter.com/view/j/alr>

Journal description:

Applied Linguistics Review (ALR) is a peer-reviewed journal that aims to serve as a testing ground for the articulation of original ideas and approaches in the study of real-world issues in which language plays a crucial role, by bringing together critical reflections of current debates and new theoretical and empirical research. The issues dealt with in ALR range from aspects of the linguistic and communicative competence of the individual such as bilingualism and multilingualism, first or second language acquisition, literacy, language disorders, to language and communication related problems in and between societies such as linguistic discrimination, language conflict, communication in the workplace, language policy and language planning, and language ideology. Articles that not only report new research findings but also engage in philosophical and methodological debates and point to directions of future research are particularly welcome.

Journal description:

The Asian Journal of English Language Teaching (AJELT) is an international blind refereed journal which reviews previously unpublished data-driven manuscripts that (1) link ESL/EFL theory, research, and pedagogy and (2) relate specifically to the teaching of English to Asians at the university level. Reviews and essays on issues and trends as well as reports of ongoing projects are also welcome.

A member of the Council of the Editors of Learned Journals (CELJ), AJELT is indexed in Linguistics Abstracts, Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts, MLA International Bibliography, Sociological Abstracts, as well as The Asian Education Index. In addition, the journal collaborates with the International Association of Applied Linguistics (AILA): AILA members are provided AJELT subscriptions at reduced rates as part of their new or renewed membership. AJELT is also recognized as an important academic publication by the international organization, Teachers of English Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL), and a description of the journal is noted on their homepage and in their print materials.

Communication & Medicine (C&M)

Editor(s): Srikant Sarangi

Editor/Journal E-mail: commed@hum.aau.dk

Journal URL: <https://journals.equinoxpub.com/index.php/CAM/index>

Journal description:

Since its inception in 2004, Communication & Medicine has been consistently interrogating the 'black box' of what is routinely characterised as 'the communicative turn' in healthcare practice in clinical and public health domains. It is now firmly established as a leading forum for these critical debates.

Communication & Medicine abides by the following aims:

- To consolidate different traditions of discourse and communication research in its commitment to an understanding of psychosocial, cultural and ethical aspects of healthcare in contemporary societies.
- To cover the different specialities within medicine and allied healthcare studies.
- To underscore the significance of specific areas and themes by bringing out special issues from time to time.
- To be fully committed to publishing evidence-based, data-driven original studies with practical application and relevance as key guiding principles.
- To be targeted at an interdisciplinary audience, which will include healthcare professionals and researchers and students in the medical, social and human sciences.
- To promote a reader-friendly style and format, including engagements with debates and dialogues on crosscutting themes of topical significance.

The CATESOL Journal

Editor(s): Mark Roberge & Margi Wald

Editor/Journal E-mail: catesoljournal@gmail.com

Journal URL: <http://catesol.org/journal.html>

Journal description:

The CATESOL Journal is the official journal of the California Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages (CATESOL). It is a refereed academic journal published annually. Articles in the CATESOL Journal focus on theory, research, pedagogy, and educational policy related to the teaching of English to speakers of other languages, including U.S.-born bilinguals, "generation 1.5" students, immigrants, and international students. Articles may focus on any educational level, from kindergarten to university, as well as on adult school and workplace literacy settings. Because The CATESOL Journal is a "mentoring journal," contributors are provided with ample feedback to assist them in the revision process. Manuscripts submitted to The CATESOL Journal typically undergo several rounds of substantive revision with guidance from reviewers--experts from CATESOL who want to help TESOLers share their ideas and projects with a larger audience.

Submission Categories (guidelines can be found at <http://www.catesol.org/cjguidelines.html>):

1. Feature articles (25-30 pages including bibliography)
2. CATESOL exchanges (up to 20 pages)
3. Reviews of books and other published materials (up to 4 pages): Review guidelines can be found at <http://www.catesol.org/cjrvw.htm>
4. Proposals for theme sections: Those interested may also submit a proposal to serve as guest editor of a theme section. The proposal should include: (a) a cover letter explaining the rationale for the theme section; (b) a tentative list of four to six authors who have agreed to write articles for the theme section; and (c) titles and abstracts of the proposed articles.

Critical Inquiry in Language Studies

Editor(s): Paul Chamness Miller (Editor); Xia Chao (Managing Editor); Ryuko Kubota (Reviews Editor)

Editor/Journal E-mail: cils@isls.co; cils.isls.inc@gmail.com

Journal URL: <http://www.tandfonline.com/toc/hcil20/current#.Vq7uQMfwdnE>

Journal description:

CILS is the peer-reviewed journal of the International Society for Language Studies. Language studies overlaps fields of applied linguistics, language policy, language planning, modern languages and literatures, education, anthropology, sociology, history, political science, psychology, and cultural studies (including related fields, such as law, media, and information technology).

The journal focuses on critical discourse and research in language matters, broadly conceived, that is generated from qualitative, critical pedagogical, and emergent paradigms. In these paradigms, language is considered to be a socially constituted cultural construct that gives shape to, and at the same time is shaped by, the larger social, political, and historical contexts of its use. The primary purpose of the journal is to provide a forum for discussion of the research from such emerging paradigms and at the same time to bridge arbitrary disciplinary territories in which it is being done.

Journal description:

English For Specific Purposes is an international peer-reviewed journal that welcomes submissions from across the world. Authors are encouraged to submit articles and research/discussion notes on topics relevant to the teaching and learning of discourse for specific communities: academic, occupational, or otherwise specialized. Topics such as the following may be treated from the perspective of English for specific purposes: second language acquisition in specialized contexts, needs assessment, curriculum development and evaluation, materials preparation, discourse analysis, descriptions of specialized varieties of English, teaching and testing techniques, the effectiveness of various approaches to language learning and language teaching, and the training or retraining of teachers for the teaching of ESP. In addition, the journal welcomes articles and discussions that identify aspects of ESP needing development, areas into which the practice of ESP may be expanded, possible means of cooperation between ESP programs and learners' professional or vocational interests, and implications that findings from related disciplines can have for the profession of ESP. The journal also carries reviews of scholarly books on topics of interest to the profession.

English Australia Journal

Editor(s): Philip Chappell

Editor/Journal E-mail: journal@englishaustralia.com

Journal URL: <http://www.englishaustralia.com.au/journal>

Journal description:

The English Australia Journal: the Australian journal of English language teaching (the English Australia Journal), is a professional and academic journal for teachers of English to speakers of other languages, specifically to international students, within and outside Australia.

The journal comprises peer-reviewed articles from TESOL practitioners and academics, both full research articles, and brief reports, as well as a section on classroom practice and reviews of TESOL resources. It is published twice a year, in April and September. Each issue is distributed to subscribers (English Australia member colleges receive three complimentary copies as a benefit of membership) and all issues are posted online. It is also hosted at Informit <http://search.informit.com.au/browseJournalTitle;res=IELHSS;issn=1449-4496>

The English Australia Journal welcomes relevant contributions from those involved in TESOL teaching, training and research within four main sections:

- peer reviewed articles outlining innovative research into classroom practice or theoretical discussion of classroom practice,
- brief reports on preliminary findings of a research work-in-progress, a summary of a larger research project in a rhetorical style that makes it accessible for English language teachers, reports of materials development projects and innovations in ELT, and the like,
- articles largely by teachers, for teachers in 'Classroom Talk',
- reviews of current print and online resources for teachers, teacher trainers and academic managers.

Journal description:

English Teaching Professional is a practical magazine which provides a forum for teachers of English around the world to exchange ideas on what has and has not worked for them in the classroom. We have articles on EFL and ESL, and there are special sections for Teaching Young Learners, Business English, Technology and Teacher Development. One of our most popular features is It Works in Practice, where contributors submit short ideas and activities. A subscription to ETp also gives you access to our entire archive of articles, which are downloadable from our website etprofessional.com.

Journal description:

Functions of Language is an international journal of linguistics which explores the functionalist perspective on the organization and use of natural language. It publishes articles and reviews books from the full spectrum of functionalist linguistics, seeking to bring out the fundamental unity behind the various schools of thought, while stimulating discussion among functionalists. It encourages the interplay of theory and description, and provides space for the detailed analysis, qualitative or quantitative, of linguistic data from a broad range of languages. Its scope is broad, covering such matters as prosodic phenomena in phonology, the clause in its communicative context, and regularities of pragmatics, conversation and discourse, as well as the interaction between the various levels of analysis. The overall purpose is to contribute to our understanding of how the use of languages in speech and writing has impacted, and continues to impact, upon the structure of those languages.

Journal description:

The aim of the International Journal of Multilingualism (IJM) is to foster, present and spread research focused on psycholinguistic, sociolinguistic and educational aspects of multilingual acquisition and multilingualism. The journal is interdisciplinary and seeks to go beyond bilingualism and second language acquisition by developing the understanding of the specific characteristics of acquiring, processing and using more than two languages.

The International Journal of Multilingualism (IJM) provides a forum wherein academics, researchers and practitioners may read and publish high-quality, original and state-of-the-art papers describing theoretical and empirical aspects that can contribute to advance our understanding of multilingualism. Topics of interest to IJM include, but are not limited to the following: early trilingualism, multilingual competence, foreign language learning within bilingual education, multilingual literacy, multilingual identity, metalinguistic awareness in multilinguals, multilingual representations in the mind or language use in multilingual communities.

Journal description:

Created in November of 1989, Issues in Applied Linguistics is a refereed journal that is currently managed, edited and published by graduate students in the TESOL Program at the Applied and Advanced Studies in Education Division, California State University Los Angeles. The journal is published once yearly and has established international distribution and a solid reputation in the fields of Applied Linguistics and TESOL. Our aim is to publish outstanding research from students, faculty, and independent researchers in the broad areas of discourse analysis, sociolinguistics, first language acquisition, second language acquisition, language analysis, language assessment, language education, language use, and research methodology. We are particularly interested in publishing new departures and cross-disciplinary endeavors in the field of Applied Linguistics.

The manuscript management of Issues in Applied Linguistics is a collaboration between California State University, Los Angeles and the University of California, Los Angeles, where the journal was originally created.

Journal of Applied Linguistics and Professional Practice (JALPP)

Editor(s): Srikant Sarangi

Editor/Journal E-mail: shussell@equinoxpub.com

Journal URL: <https://journals.equinoxpub.com/index.php/JALPP>

Journal description:

Journal of Applied Linguistics and Professional Practice is the new title for Journal of Applied Linguistics, which was launched in 2004 with the aim of advancing research and practice in applied linguistics as a principled and interdisciplinary endeavour. From Volume 7, the journal adopted the new title to reflect the continuation, expansion and re-specification of the field of applied linguistics as originally conceived. Moving away from a primary focus on research into language teaching/learning and second language acquisition, the education profession will remain a key site but one among many, with an active engagement of the journal moving to sites from a variety of other professional domains such as law, healthcare, counselling, journalist, business interpreting and translating, where applied linguists have major contributions to make. Accordingly, under the new title, the journal will reflexively foreground applied linguistics as professional practice. Each volume contains a selection of special features such as editorials, specialist conversations, debates and dialogues on specific methodological themes, review articles, research notes and targeted special issues addressing key themes.

Journal description:

The Journal of Asian Pacific Communication (JAPC) is an international journal whose academic mission is to bring together specialists from diverse scholarly disciplines to discuss and interpret language in communication issues as they pertain to people of Asian Pacific regions and in their immigrant communities worldwide. The journal's academic orientation is generalist, passionately committed to interdisciplinary approaches to language in communication studies relating to people in and from Asian Pacific regions. The JAPC welcomes manuscripts along the lines of this mission statement, and moreover, encourages leading researchers in the Asian Pacific to take advantage of the journal's policy to publish guest-edited issues on specific topics of investigation. The JAPC is refereed according to rigorous criteria of evaluation.

Journal of Language, Identity, and Education (JLIE)

Editor(s): Yasuko Kanno & Wayne E. Wright

Editor/Journal E-mail: yakanno@bu.edu, wewright@purdue.edu

Journal URL: <http://www.tandfonline.com/loi/hliehttp>

Journal description:

The Journal of Language, Identity, & Education (JLIE) is an international forum for interdisciplinary research that is grounded in theory and of interest to scholars and policymakers. Education plays a central role in promoting social development, stability, integration, and equity in a linguistically and culturally diverse world. Policy decisions in educational settings today often require an understanding of the relations between home language/variety and school language/variety, relations of language, ethnicity, and gender identity construction, societal attitudes toward languages/varieties, and differential performance across groups. JLIE will consider submitted contributions to its Articles, Research Notes, and The Forum section. JLIE seeks cutting edge interdisciplinary research from around the world, reflecting diverse theoretical and methodological frameworks and topical areas and solicits articles that deal with the following topics:

- Educational policies and approaches that explicitly address various dimensions of diversity;
- The formation and consequences of identities in educational and other social contexts;
- Language policies and linguistic rights in educational contexts;
- The role of indigenous languages/varieties in education;
- Critical studies of literacy policies, national literacy and biliteracy demographics, the socioeconomic and political significance of literacy, and societal expectations regarding literacy;
- Research on the relation between home/local linguistic and cultural socialization and schooling;
- Critical and comparative analyses of official and legal frameworks for educational policies and practices in diverse settings;
- Critical studies of school and community attitudes and expectations about schooling;
- Critical studies about bias in schooling practices;
- Research on educational practices that promote educational equity for diverse student populations;
- The role of ideologies in educational language and cultural policies; and
- Group-specific studies on special needs/issues and on effective policies and practices.

Journal of Multilingual and Multicultural Development

Editor(s): John Edwards

Editor/Journal E-mail: jedwards@stfx.ca

Journal URL: <http://www.tandfonline.com/rmmm>

Journal description:

JMMD – 2013 is its thirty-fourth year of operation – continues to thrive, with a healthy subscription list and a vibrant set of contributors. We have steadily moved, for some years now, towards macro-level coverage of topics in the sociology and social psychology of language, in language and cultural politics, policy and practice in all arenas, and in the many ramifications of these broad themes. Such a broad remit takes in the following matters, among others:

- language planning and policy
- ethnicity and nationalism
- identity politics (with its linguistic, religious and other markers)
- languages and cultures in contact
- intertwinings among language, culture and religion
- bilingual and multilingual accommodations
- translation
- programmes and policies of multiculturalism and pluralism
- language rights (group and individual)
- “popular” and folk sociolinguistics and usage
- reading and literacy
- contemporary religious and cultural debates
- collective identity and its ‘markers’
- minority-group dynamics
- educational provisions for languages and cultures
- endangered languages

An implication is that it is increasingly less likely that we will publish single-subject or small-n studies, fine-grained analyses of discourse, conversation and code-switching, or work in other tightly-focused or technical areas in linguistics, psycholinguistics and educational linguistics. Also unlikely to see the light of day in our pages are overly short or anecdotal pieces, articles that describe language situations without attempting to extract generalities or to furnish proper contextualisation, and papers of excessively narrow scope. Contributions that allow generalisation across settings are particularly welcome, as are those that embed the discussion in social and historical context.

Journal of Pragmatics

Editor(s): Michael Haugh and Marina Terkourafi

Editor/Journal E-mail: michael.haugh@uq.edu.au>, m.terkourafi@hum.leidenuniv.nl

Journal URL: <http://www.journals.elsevier.com/journal-of-pragmatics/>

Journal description:

Linguistic pragmatics has been able to formulate a number of questions over the years that are essential to our understanding of language as people's main instrument of "natural" and "societal" interaction. By providing possible theoretical foundations for the study of linguistic practice, linguistic pragmatics has helped to increase our knowledge of the forms, functions, and foundations, of human interaction. The Journal of Pragmatics identifies with the above general scope and aims of pragmatics. The journal welcomes authoritative, innovative pragmatic scholarship from all practice oriented linguistic standpoints. It provides a forum for pragmatic studies in sociolinguistics, general linguistics, conversation analysis, discourse analysis, cognitive linguistics, computational linguistics, applied linguistics and other areas of linguistic research.

In addition, it endeavors to narrow the distance between linguistics and such neighbouring disciplines as communication science (including the study of face-to-face interaction and nonverbal communication), information science (including artificial intelligence research and, in general, the theory and practice of machine-human interaction), psychiatry (including the study of schizophrenic speech), and neuropsychology (including the study of speaking and reading disorders). The journal welcomes both those contributions originating in linguistics proper, and those taking neighboring, related fields as their point of departure.

Journal description:

Language Policy contributes to the growth of the field by publishing high-quality studies that help build a sound theoretical understanding of the subject area. It presents papers that deal with the widest range of cases, situations and regions. This journal covers both language policy and educational policy. It presents policies concerning the status and form of languages as well as acquisition policies pertaining to the teaching and learning of languages. It contains detailed accounts of promoting and managing language policy and research papers on the development, implementation and effects of language policy in all regions of the world and under different conditions. The journal also includes empirical studies that contribute to a theory of language policy. In addition, Language Policy examines policy development by governments and governmental agencies, non-governmental organizations and business enterprises as well as attempts made by ethnic, religious and minority groups to establish, resist, or modify language policies.

Language Teaching is the essential research resource for language professionals providing a rich and expert overview of research in the field of second-language teaching and learning. It offers critical survey articles of recent research on specific topics, second and foreign languages and countries, and invites original research articles reporting on replication studies and meta-analyses. The journal also includes regional surveys of outstanding doctoral dissertations, topic-based research timelines, theme-based research agendas, and recent plenary conference speeches. Research-in-progress reports, themed comparative book review articles and a list of publications received complement the content of each issue. We are pleased to announce that Language Teaching has achieved an Impact Factor of 2.000 in the 2015 Thomson Reuters Journal Citation Reports® placing it 9/161 for Linguistics and 22/216 for Education and Educational Research.

Language Variation and Change

Editor(s): William Labov and Rena Torres Cacoullos

Editor/Journal E-mail: lvcjournal@psu.edu

Journal URL: <http://journals.cambridge.org/LVC>

Journal description:

Language Variation and Change is the only journal dedicated exclusively to the study of linguistic variation and the capacity to deal with systematic and inherent variation in synchronic and diachronic linguistics.

Sociolinguistics involves analysing the interaction of language, culture and society; the more specific study of variation is concerned with the impact of this interaction on the structures and processes of traditional linguistics. Language Variation and Change concentrates on the details of linguistic structure in actual speech production and processing (or writing), including contemporary or historical sources.

Editor(s): Hilde Hasselgård & Signe Oksefjell Ebeling

Editor/Journal E-mail: languages-in-contrast@ilos.uio.no

Journal URL: <http://www.benjamins.com/#catalog/journals/lic/main>

Journal description:

- Languages in Contrast aims to publish contrastive studies of two or more languages. Any aspect of language may be covered, including vocabulary, phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, text and discourse, stylistics, sociolinguistics and psycholinguistics.
- Languages in Contrast welcomes interdisciplinary studies, particularly those that make links between contrastive linguistics and translation, lexicography, computational linguistics, language teaching, literary and linguistic computing, literary studies and cultural studies.
- Languages in Contrast provides a home for contrastive linguistics. It enables advocates of different theoretical linguistic frameworks to publish in a single publication to the benefit of all involved in contrastive research.
- Languages in Contrast provides a forum to explore the theoretical status of the field; stimulates research into a wide range of languages; and helps to give the field of contrastive linguistics a distinct identity.

Editor/Journal E-mail: linguistic.discovery@dartmouth.edu

Journal URL: <http://linguistic-discovery.dartmouth.edu>

Journal description:

Linguistic Discovery is a fully electronic journal dedicated to the description and analysis of primary linguistic data. The amazing linguistic diversity of our planet poses a great intellectual challenge to linguists as we attempt to define what aspects of language and language use are universal versus those which are particular to subsets of the world's languages. Linguistic Discovery provides a platform for linguists to explore these issues and to inform others about linguistic phenomena that deepen our understanding of language, as well our appreciation for it.

Journal URL: <http://www.degruyter.com/view/j/mult>

Journal description:

Multilingua is a refereed academic journal devoted to multilingualism, language learning, intercultural communication and translating and interpreting in their social contexts. Multilingua focusses on critical sociolinguistic studies of language and communication in globalization, transnationalism, migration and mobility across time and space.

Now publishing six issues per volume, Multilingua has established itself as an international forum for interdisciplinary research on linguistic diversity in social life. Multilingua is particularly interested in publishing high-quality empirical yet theoretically-grounded research from hitherto neglected sociolinguistic contexts worldwide.

Multilingua is aimed at scholars, students and practitioners and promotes an appreciation of linguistic and cultural diversity and contributes to research and practice in language education, communication management, and policy and planning.

In addition to research articles, Multilingua also publishes research notes, reports, debates, review articles and short reviews. Multilingua regularly includes special issues devoted to the in-depth exploration of a specific topic in the field.

Journal description: The Reading Matrix: An International Online Journal is a peer-reviewed professional journal with an editorial board of scholars in the fields of second language acquisition and applied linguistics. The journal seeks to disseminate research to educators around the world. It is interested in exploring issues related to L2 reading, L2 literacy in a broader sense, and other issues related to second language learning and teaching. This publication was created as an interactive journal, not an electronic version of a traditional print publication. The journal is published twice a year exclusively on the World Wide Web. We encourage educators and researchers to submit articles on a variety of topics dealing with second language literacy and applied linguistics. We also encourage authors to submit book reviews and software reviews.

Journal description:

TESOL Quarterly, a professional, refereed journal, was first published in 1967. The Quarterly encourages submission of previously unpublished articles on topics of significance to individuals concerned with English language teaching and learning and standard English as a second dialect. As a publication that represents a variety of cross-disciplinary interests, both theoretical and practical, the Quarterly invites manuscripts on a wide range of topics, especially in the following areas:

- psychology and sociology of language learning and teaching
- issues in research and research methodology
- testing and evaluation
- professional preparation
- curriculum design and development
- instructional methods, materials, and techniques
- language planning
- professional standards

Because the Quarterly is committed to publishing manuscripts that contribute to bridging theory and practice in our profession, it particularly welcomes submissions that address the implications and applications of research in, for example: anthropology, applied and theoretical linguistics, communication education, English education, (including reading and writing theory), psycholinguistics, psychology, first and second language acquisition, sociolinguistics, and sociology.

The Quarterly prefers that all submissions be written in a style that is accessible to a broad readership, including those individuals who may not be familiar with the subject matter. TESOL Quarterly is an international journal. It welcomes submissions from English language contexts around the world.

Journal description:

Text & Talk (founded as TEXT in 1981) is an internationally recognized forum for interdisciplinary research in language, discourse, and communication studies, focusing, among other things, on the situational and historical nature of text/talk production; the cognitive and sociocultural processes of language practice/action; and participant-based structures of meaning negotiation and multimodal alignment. Text & Talk encourages critical debates on these and other relevant issues, spanning not only the theoretical and methodological dimensions of discourse but also their practical and socially relevant outcomes.
